An Organized Way to Hang Your Photos!

There are so many neat and cool ways you can hang your photos. Here's just another idea!

An Organized Photo CD Box

Family Year Books!

One of the things I highly recommend clients do when photo/memorabilia organizing is to create a Shutterfly.com coffee table book (makes awesome Mother's/Father's Day, Anniversary, and Grandparent Gifts too by the way)! You can also create Family Year Books. This takes scrapbooking to a whole new level--you'll love how easy and fun it is! It clears up the clutter, and gives additional photo storage back-up!

Tip: Google Shutterfly Coupons when you're ready to check-out.

Tip: Take Pictures of Memorabilia Items vs. Keeping Them

Know that old T-shirt from high school that you loved and still love, but no longer fits? Take a picture of it, and add it to your photo album, donating the shirt instead of it collecting dust! You can do this with any memorabilia item that can be donated / recycled to de-clutter your space while still preserving your special memories of the item! Whip out your camera phone to take the snapshot, and you can immediately post it on your social media, send it as an email/text, save it to your camera roll on your phone, and download it to your computer files (even print it out if you want!) Gotta love technology!
